1 Getting around in Montreal

1.1 Transportation options from the airport

Montréal Trudeau International Airport (previously named Dorval International Airport) is served by taxi and limosine, a shuttle bus service called the Aérobus, and city buses.

Taxi and Limosine Taxis and limosines are available just outside the terminal. Both can be paid for with Canadian cash, or by credit card (Visa, Mastercard, or American Express). American funds are also accepted by some drivers. The cost to downtown is $35 by taxi and $50 by limosine; travel time is 25 minutes.

Aérobús The Aérobus is a shuttle service from the airport to Montréal's central bus station, at the Berri-UQAM metro. Tickets can be purchased at a counter within the terminal or at a booth outside. Departures are roughly every half-hour. The cost is $13 and travel time is 40 minutes.

City Bus Travelling to downtown by city bus is the cheapest option, but also the most time consuming. It is not recommended for delegates with lots of luggage! Bus 204 departs from the airport every half hour and should be taken to the Dorval train station. Be sure to ask the driver for a transfer ticket. From there, transfer to bus route 211 and take it to the Lionel-Groulx metro station. Lionel-Groulx is a short ride from downtown. The cost is $2.50, which must be in exact change, and travel time is about 60 minutes.

1.2 Directions to the Schulich School of Music

The Schulich School of Music (see 2(a)) is easily accessible by public transit. Delegates staying close to Sherbrooke should take the route 24 bus, while those further afield may find the metro more convenient.

By Bus Route 24 runs along Sherbrooke and stops at the Schulich School of Music. Delegates should disembark at Aylmer Street. Fare is $2.50 and must be in exact change. Service is frequent (every 10 minutes) during the morning rush hour, though waits may be longer at other times.

By Metro The Schulich School of Music is located at the McGill metro station (see 1(a)). Take the Union St. exit (see 1(b) top), turn right, and walk north for two blocks to Sherbrooke St. (see 1(b) bottom).

A map of the McGill campus showing event locations is provided in Fig. 2(a).

3 Making the most of Montréal

If you plan to arrive prior to the beginning, or stay past the end of the conference, allow us to suggest a few ways to make the most of your time in Montréal.

For more ideas, visit the Infotouriste center located at 1001 Square-Dorchester Street (corner of Peel and St. Catherine's) near the Peel metro. The center can be reached by phone at 514-873-2015.

3.1 Places to stroll

Prince Arthur and St. Louis Square Prince Arthur Street, between St. Laurent and St. Denis, is a quaint pedestrian zone filled with buskers and 'bring your own wine' restaurants. The nearby St. Louis Square is a charming corner of the city.

St. Denis from St. Louis Square to St. Catherine's This stretch of St. Denis Street displays mid 19th century Victorian architecture in an area which has historically been the commercial center of French Montréal. It abounds with cafés, bars, bistros and restaurants.

3.2 Parks

From a European perspective Montréal is a very green city. Many of our tree-lined streets lead to easily accessible parks.

Parc du Mount-Royal Atop the mountain from which the city takes its name, the Mount Royal Park was designed in the late 19th century by Frederick Law Olmstead. Olmstead, the famous American landscape architect, was also responsible for New York's Central Park. The lookout from the chalet du montagne offers an impressive view of the city. Walking trails begin at the top of Peel Street and in the Jeanne-Mance Park (Parc Avenue between Duluth and Mont-Royal), though, for the less athletically inclined, the park is also accessible by the route 11 bus leaving from the Mount-Royal metro.

Parc Jean-Drapeau Located in the middle of the St. Lawrence River, Parc Jean-Drapeau consists of the islands of Sainte-Hélène and Notre-Dame, which hosted Expo '67. A mosaic of water and green space with diverse attractions and events, the park is accessible by metro, at the Jean-Drapeau station.

3.3 Shopping areas

St. Catherine's Street St. Catherine's is Montréal's bustling central commercial district, reputed to support 1200 shops between Guy and St. Denis streets. Many popular fashion boutiques lie on this strip. The Eaton center, at University Street, is an indoor complex home to 175 shops and restaurants.

St. Laurent Boulevard Nicknamed 'the main', and historically the meeting place between French and English Montréal, St. Laurent now offers a trendy mix of unique shops, great restaurants, and vibrant nightlife.
